Dedicated to conserving Delaware's coastal and natural resources, Delaware Wild Lands (DWL) is Delaware's oldest and largest land trust, as well as its largest nonprofit, non-government landowner. DWL safeguards over 31,000 acres of land, with 21,800 acres under its ownership, restoration, and management. These lands support vital wildlife habitats, wetlands, and forests, essential for Delaware's ecological health. Today, Delawareans enjoy protected natural areas thanks to the organization's efforts. Join us in celebrating six decades of environmental stewardship, learn more about DWL's #RestoreMore2024 Initiative, and continue building a sustainable future for future generations.

Marcia Fox, the new Executive Director of Delaware Wild Lands – Delaware's oldest and largest land trust, is a native Delawarean and an alumna of Delaware State University. With over two decades of experience, Marcia specializes in natural resource planning for local entities. Her expertise includes aiding private landowners and communities in habitat management and conservation planning and managing various programs related to water quality protection, drainage, and stormwater.
